Short description of your institution/company:

AJUSA is a Spanish company dedicated to the development of fuel cells in addition to the development of pioneering projects in the field of green hydrogen generation from the integration of renewable energies. With nearly twenty years of experience, we were pioneers in the implementation of the first private Hydrogen refuelling station in use in Spain, as well as the introduction of static power generators powered by this gas. Together our fuel cells manufacturing, we are currently developing pilot plant projects, as well as mobility projects related to hydrogen. Our penetration as consultants extends through several South American, European, and Asian countries. Our premise is collaboration with local companies to form a hydrogen economy that will last over time.
